

VMware Server Community does not exist? ...

Peter_vm 9,058 posts since

Feb 1, 2006 When trying:

<http://communities.vmware.com/community/vmtn/server/server>

I have got message:

VMware Communities System Error

The specified community does not exist

I do not recall any announcements about shutting down that community.

RDellimagine 1,678 posts since

Jul 19, 2004 1. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 10, 2008 5:24 PM

I moved the community (and a couple of other ones as well). You'll see that the organization is much clearer.

The VMware Server community is at <http://communities.vmware.com/community/vmtn/server>

Regards, Robert

Robert Dell'Imagine, Director of VMware Communities

asatoran 2,926 posts since

Jun 23, 2006 2. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 10, 2008 5:27 PM

I noticed that the My Communities list changed from Server Products to Management and Automation Products. So I was thinking there's some reorganization going on?

Edit: And I see Server in the list of forums, but when choosing it, I get the does not exist error.

RDellimagine 1,678 posts since

Jul 19, 2004 3. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 10, 2008 6:21 PM

See VMware Communities Organization Changes. - Robert

Robert Dell'Imagine, Director of VMware Communities

asatoran 2,926 posts since

Jun 23, 2006 4. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 10, 2008 6:45 PM

👤 in response to: RDellimagine Understood, but you'll want to update all the links. They're still pointing to <http://communities.vmware.com/community/vmtn/mgmt/server> instead of <http://communities.vmware.com/community/vmtn/server> (All Communities menu, My Communities menu, and main Communities webpage.)

VMware Server Community does not exist? ...

Also, the "mark all as read" link takes you to back to /mgmt/server.

RDellimagine 1,678 posts since

Jul 19, 2004 5. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 10, 2008 7:04 PM

👤 in response to: asatoran This should resolve itself when the caches clear. I manually cleared the application caches, but the downstream caches may need some time to clear themselves. Regards, Robert

Robert Dell'Imagine, Director of VMware Communities

asatoran 2,926 posts since

Jun 23, 2006 6. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 10, 2008 7:07 PM

👤 in response to: RDellimagine Thanks. The links appear to be working now. Much appreciated. 😊

wila 3,266 posts since

Jun 27, 2006 7. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 13, 2008 2:25 AM

👤 in response to: RDellimagine Well I wonder how many days it is going to take to "clear the cache".... Yesterday I got a couple of times that the community "does not exist" errors and today we are there again:

"

System Error

* The specified thread was not found.

"

Besides the performance has dropped dramatically again. Sometimes it takes up to one minute for a page to display :*(

No forums today as far as I'm concerned.

--

Wil

wila 3,266 posts since

Jun 27, 2006 8. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 13, 2008 2:27 AM

👤 in response to: RDellimagine Well it is back again..... forum troubles!!

I even got this error here while posting (maybe it went through, but I got the reply below)

System Error

* The specified thread was not found.

Yawn.... this has got to stop, why can't it just work?

VMware Server Community does not exist? ...

--

Wil

RDellimagine 1,678 posts since

Jul 19, 2004 9. Re: VMware Server Community does not exist? Jun 13, 2008 7:36 AM in response to: wila See Re: System error.

Robert Dell'Imagine, Director of VMware Communities